Presidential Ponderings

The SDA Board of Directors met in San Francisco earlier this month in conjunction with the PAA Annual Meeting. Bridget Gorman and Stephanie Bohon, coeditors of Population Research and Policy Review (PR²), presented a positive report on the journal. PR² truly has an international flavor having received submissions from 27 countries. Additionally, over 7,300 institutions have access to the journal, and the journal's impact factor continues to climb. Stephanie and Bridget encourage SDA members to submit their high-quality manuscripts to PR². They also need responsible reviewers to ensure that manuscripts receive a short turnaround time. Please accept if they ask you to review a manuscript; or, better yet, volunteer to review. To volunteer, email prpr@rice.edu and include a list of topics on which you feel comfortable reviewing. All SDA members on the listserv should be receiving a Table of Contents alert from Springer: take a look at the articles being published.

The Board also discussed potential candidates for SDA officers and is currently in the process of contacting these individuals. The success of the Association depends upon the efforts of all of our members, so please respond positively if you are asked to take a leadership position. All members should be receiving notification of online balloting within the next few weeks. We have had tied elections in the past so your vote really is important!

As discussed elsewhere in this newsletter, the 2013 SDA meeting will be held at the Williamsburg Hospitality House. This meeting will be our first in Williamsburg. I encourage you to not only attend the meeting, but to take advantage of the special room rate either before or after the conference and visit Colonial Williamsburg and Jamestown. If you have not already submitted your paper or poster, remember the deadline is June 1 this year. All submissions should be made through the SDA website (<http://sda-demography.org/SDA2012.php>).

If you have any suggestions or comments about the Southern Demographic Association, please email me (rhfreym@presby.edu).

PRPR SPECIAL ISSUE #1: 2010 CENSUS

Call for Papers: Population Research and Policy Review, special issue

Topic: New Findings from the 2010 Census

Editors: Stephanie Bohon, along with Guest Editor William O'Hare

Population Research and Policy Review is accepting submissions for a special issue entitled, "New Findings from the 2010 Census." Submissions are open to all, and research notes as well as full-length manuscripts will be accepted for this issue. Only completed work can be considered, and manuscripts will be peer reviewed.

Our intent with this special issue is to highlight empirical findings from the 2010 Census that demonstrate changes in the US population, that bring attention to issues related to data collection methods, or that critique Census 2010 reported findings. Manuscripts must be submitted online at <http://www.springer.com/social+sciences/population+studies/journal/11113> Interest in the special issue must be stated in the notes to the editor.

The call for papers will close on September 1, 2012; no papers received after that date will be considered for the special issue, although they will be received for possible publication in a regular issue.

For all inquiries on this special issue, please contact Stephanie Bohon (sbohon@utk.edu) or William O'Hare (billohare1@gmail.com).

PRPR SPECIAL ISSUE #2: POPULATION PERSPECTIVES ON SEXUAL MINORITY STATUS

Call for Papers: Population Research and Policy Review, special issue

Topic: Population Perspectives on Sexual Minority Status

Editors: Bridget Gorman, along with Guest Editor Justin Denney (of Rice University)

Population Research and Policy Review is seeking papers for a special issue that explores population issues relating to sexual minority status. Although population-related scholarship on LGBT (lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender) groups has been growing in recent years, information to date is still quite limited. Our intent with this special issue is to highlight empirical and theoretical manuscripts that make a novel contribution to scholarship in this area of study. In particular, we are interested in papers that describe and investigate the demographic and socioeconomic characteristics of LGBT populations, as well as papers that explore how sexual minority status relates to health status, behaviors, mortality, and medical care use; family structure and interpersonal relationships; stigma, discrimination, and violence; and other population-related issues that readers of PRPR would find of interest.

Only completed papers will be considered, and all submitted papers will go through the standard peer review process for PRPR submissions. Papers may be empirical or theoretical in nature. The call for papers will close on November 1, 2012; no papers received after that date will be considered for the special issue, although they will be received for possible publication in a regular issue. For all inquiries on this special issue, please contact Bridget Gorman (bkgorman@rice.edu) and Justin Denney (Justin.denney@rice.edu).
